war ii the main questions asked are how did the u s become involved in these wars how were the wars conducted and how did the u s get out of these wars in korea and vietnam the us fought to show the world that it would stand up to the evils of communism that it could be counted on with money advisors or even a major military effort if necessary to halt the advance of communism but in both wars the us showed itself to be militarily vulnerable in its wars against radical islam since 9 11 the united states has made use of its military to protect its interests in the middle east particularly its oil interests while trying to spread its ideas of democracy constitutionalism and the rule of law the lessons are clear america s values often do not translate into the less developed world in 2016 as the debate over isis intensifies america at war since 1945 reminds us that the history of us postwar military conflict has seldom been marked by clearly defined goals and outcomes skyhorse publishing as well as our arcade imprint are proud to publish a broad range of books for readers interested in history books about world war ii the third reich hitler and his henchmen the jfk assassination conspiracies the american civil war the american revolution gladiators vikings ancient rome medieval times the old west and much more while not every title we publish becomes a new york times bestseller or a national bestseller we are committed to books on subjects that are sometimes overlooked and to authors whose work might not otherwise find a home this book explores the economic development trajectories of south korea and vietnam focusing on the role of the state on economic success amidst similarities and differences in their experiences the central role of the state in generating economic development is certainly evident in both cases but are the paths institutions policies and environments the same these are among the matters that this book explores through a systematic comparative analysis of economic development and the role of the state in south korea and vietnam the results of this analysis provide lessons that will be useful for other developing countries as well as deepen our understanding of the development experiences of south korea and vietnam this book is a remarkable and timely contribution first this book provides new insights into the understanding of the dynamics and diversity of economic development across the world and asia as well as in korea and vietnam in particular while it does not aim to offer a comprehensive study of the economic intervention policies by either countrys government and their impacts it provides broad and qualitative perspectives on how these policies are selected implemented and developed at different stages of economic development and in different social and political contexts secondly by tracing the historical trajectories of the changes to the extent of government involvement in economic development in korea and vietnam presently this book contributes to the debate on the efficacy and continuity of the well worn east asian model of economic development and gives a line of empirical evidence finally it will help lay out the blueprint of the vietnamese development model as envisioned by the korean development model the innovative nature of this book can be summarized as follows first this book engages a historical perspective in order to explore and understand the dynamics of the role of the government this approach will be valuable to examine how the government has adapted to changes in environmental conditions during the process of development industrialization and globalization thus the development trajectories of each country have been examined according to three key stages secondly the book uses a comparative method comparing a wide range of economic social and political development indicators between the two countries the comparison between two very different east asian countries with distinctive social economic and political systems and at different stages of development can be instructive to show whether the state led east asian model has changed evolved diminished or is in terminal decline finally the book uses a qualitative method to generate comprehensive country case studies that are essential to uncover the specific dynamics underlying different development trajectories and outcomes african american leaders such as frederick douglass long advocated military service as an avenue to equal citizenship for black americans yet segregation in the u s armed forces did not officially end until president harry truman issued an executive order in 1948 what followed at home and in the field is the subject of brotherhood in combat the first full length interdisciplinary study of the integration of the american military during the korean and vietnam wars using a wealth of oral histories from black and white soldiers and marines who served in one or both conflicts jeremy p maxwell explores racial tension pervasive in rear units but relatively rare on the front lines his work reveals that in initially proving their worth to their white brethren on the battlefield african americans changed the prevailing attitudes of those ranking officials who could bring about changes in policy brotherhood in combat also illustrates the schism over attitudes toward civil military relations that developed between blacks who had entered the service prior to vietnam and those who were drafted and thus brought revolutionary ideas from the continental united states to the war zone more important maxwell demonstrates how even at the height of civil rights unrest at home black and white soldiers found a sense of brotherhood in the jungles of vietnam incorporating military diplomatic social racial and ethnic topics and perspectives brotherhood in combat presents a remarkably thorough and finely textured account of integration as it was experienced and understood in mid twentieth century america an analysis of the army1s post korea pre vietnam era discusses the army1s concern about the implications of nuclear warfare between the korean and the vietnam war the author argues that during these years the army not only survived an institutional identity crisis but grew to meet new challenges by pioneering the development of rockets and missiles 25 photos and figures extensive bibliography revisionist overview of the bureaucratic politics of preindustrial china vietnam and korea focuses on the political and administrative theory of the three mandarinates and their long experimentation with governments recruited in part through meritocratic civil service examinations remarkable for their transparent procedures the quest for merit based bureaucracy stemmed from the idea that good politics could be established through the development of people the training of people to be politically useful centuries before civil service examinations emerged in the western world these three asian countries were basing bureaucratic advancement on examinations in addition to patronage but the evolution of the mandarinates cannot be accommodated by our usual timetables of what is modern the history of china vietnam and korea suggests that the rationalization processes we think of as modern may occur independently of one another and separate from such landmarks as the growth of capitalism or the industrial revolution a sophisticated examination of asian political traditions both their achievements and the associated risks this book removes modernity from a standard eurocentric understanding and offers a unique new perspective on the transnational nature of asian history and on global historical time why have some states in the developing world been more successful at facilitating industrialization than others challenging theories that privilege industrial policy and colonial legacies this book focuses on state structure and the politics of state formation arguing that a cohesive state structure is as important to developmental success as effective industrial policy based on a comparison of six asian cases including both capitalist and socialist states with varying structural cohesion tuong vu proves that it is state formation politics rather than colonial legacies that have had decisive and lasting impacts on the structures of emerging states his cross national comparison of south korea vietnam republican and maoist china and sukarno s and suharto s indonesia which is augmented by in depth analyses of state formation processes in vietnam and indonesia is an important contribution to understanding the dynamics of state formation and economic development in asia in his history of the army in the years between the korean and vietnam wars lieutenant colonel a j bacevich us army accents the army s mindfulness of the implications of nuclear warfare the army s concern reflecting a complex mixing of institutional strategic and operational considerations led to major changes in army organization doctrine and weapons the author argues that during these years the army not only survived an institutional identity crisis grappling to comprehend and define its national security role in a subsequently directed the army to perform viewing itself as an instrument for intervention in highly politicized conflicts of limited scale would have enabled the army over the long run to equip organize and train its soldiers in ways far more pertinent to what they actually have been called on to do argues that america s wars in the philippines japan korea and vietnam were actually all part of a sustained u s bid for dominance in asia this is a book with two course outlines one for korean history and philosophy and the other for vietnam history with an emphasis on the vietnam war both course outlines contain numerous lesson plan outlines for each discipline that will help examine the history of these two asian countries even as a boy growing up amid the green hills of rural pennsylvania robert w black knew he was destined to become a ranger with their three hundred year history of peerless courage and independence of spirit rangers are a uniquely american brand of soldier one foot in the military one in the wilderness and that is what fired black s imagination in this searing inspiring memoir black recounts how he devoted himself body and soul to his proud service as an elite u s army ranger in korea and vietnam and what those years have taught him about himself his country and our future born at the start of the great depression black grew up on a farm at a time of great hardship but also tremendous national determination he was a kid who toughened up fast who learned the hard way to rely on his strength and his wits who saw the country go to war with germany and japan and wept because he was too young to serve as soon as the army would take him black enlisted and as soon as he could muscle his way in he became a ranger as a private first class in the 82d airborne division headquarters black withstood the humiliations of enlisted service in the peacetime brown shoe army when the korean war began he volunteered and trained to be an airborne ranger in korea this young warrior his mind and body bursting with the lusts of adolescence grew up fast literally in the line of fire in clean vivid prose black describes the hell of giving his all for a country that lacked the political resolve to give its all to a war against the north koreans and the chinese in korea was not a vietnam was maddening the heart of this book is devoted to the years of action that black saw in long an province starting in 1967 black writes of the perplexity of collaborating with south vietnamese officers whose culture and motives he never fully understood he conjures up the sudden shock of the tet offensive and the daily horror of seeing fellow soldiers and innocent civilians slaughtered sometimes by stray bullets often by carelessness or treachery vietnam challenged everything black had come to believe in and left him totally unprepared for the hostility he would face when he returned to a war weary america written with extraordinary candor and passion a ranger born is the memoir of a man who dedicated the best of his life to everything that is great and enduring about america at once intimate in its revelations and universal in its themes it is a book with profound relevance to our own troubled time in history i gave considerable thought as to what the title of my autobiography should be there was never any question that a portion of the title would read the life experiences of a world war ii korea and vietnam american army veteran but how would i be described in view of the many race descriptions the u s census has used for the black citizens since the first census in 1790 should i be described as a colored black mulatto quadroon octoroon african american or negro american army veterans i chose black as being the most descriptive term and as james brown said i m black and i m proud my life experiences include a few race related incidents that occurred before during and after my military service each incident could have greatly influenced my overall attitude towards life in general and in an adverse manner but fortunately did not q jarone batson excerpt we lined up in front of tables arranged by mos military occupation speciality i stood in line at the field radio operator table and waited for my turn i took my turn and a lance corporal seated behind the table picked up one of scores of stamps and stamped my orders i read my orders and the imprint said su 1 1st anglico fmf westpac ok i knew fmf meant fleet marine force and westpac meant western pacific vietnam but i had never seen or heard of su 1 1st anglico i asked the lance corporal what anglico was he looked at my orders and said he had no idea he tapped the corporal working beside him showed him my orders and asked him where i was going the corporal shook his head and said he had never heard of it the lance corporal gave me back my orders looked into my eyes and said you re going to hell private that made me a bit anxious luckily one of the guys i went through boot camp with john staunton also had the same orders so if i was going to hell i wasn t going alone i served 19 months with the republic of korea s 2nd marine brigade blue dragon brigade with one other enlisted u s marine much of that time was at company level we wore their uniform ate their food and learned their customs and habits we learned how to communicate with those we were assigned to serve it is a rare day that i do not think of that time in my life i decided to tell the story the cold war was a battle for hearts and minds between free market capitalism and communism represented by the confrontation between the two post world war ii superpowers the usa and the soviet union this is the story of how australia in a frantic search for defence security threw in its lot with the united states in korea and vietnam and with the british in malaya it tells of the paranoid but totally unfounded fear of communist china sweeping south to conquer a defenceless australia successive australian conservative governments sent australian soldiers sailors and airmen to anti communist conflicts that mostly ended in stalemate or humiliating defeat read how the menzies government split the nation by establishing an unfair and unnecessary national service scheme that took hundreds of young australians to their deaths in the jungles of vietnam in an unsuccessful bid to gain favour with a powerful ally the cold war was a time of great tension suspicion and division it was also a time when the world especially australia was forever changed when trust gave way to cynicism foreword by bill richardson abnormal relations between countries theories of normalization vietnam north korea conclusions based on alternative paradigms epilogue north korea and world war iii afterword by johan galtung focusing primarily on politics and foreign policy america at war since 1945 analyzes america s involvement in its several wars since the end of world war ii the main questions asked are how did the u s become involved in these wars how were the wars conducted and how did the u s get out of these wars in korea and vietnam the us fought to show the world that it would stand up to the evils of communism that it could be counted on with money advisors or even a major military effort if necessary to halt the advance of communism but in both wars the us showed itself to be militarily vulnerable in its wars against radical islam since 9 11 the united states has made use of its military to protect its interests in the middle east particularly its oil interests while trying to spread its ideas of democracy constitutionalism and the rule of law the lessons are clear america s values often do not translate into the less developed world in 2016 as the debate over isis intensifies america at war since 1945 reminds us that the history of us postwar military conflict has seldom been marked by clearly defined goals and outcomes skyhorse publishing as well as our arcade imprint are proud to publish a african american leaders such as frederick douglass long advocated military service as an avenue to equal citizenship for black americans yet segregation in the u s armed forces did not officially end until president harry truman issued an executive order in 1948 what followed at home and in the field is the subject of brotherhood in combat the first full length interdisciplinary study of the integration of the american military during the korean and vietnam wars using a wealth of oral histories from black and white soldiers and marines who served in one or both conflicts jeremy p maxwell explores racial tension pervasive in rear units but relatively rare on the front lines his work reveals that in initially proving their worth to their white brethren on the battlefield african americans changed the prevailing attitudes of those ranking officials who could bring about changes in policy brotherhood in combat also illustrates the schism over attitudes toward civil military relations that developed between blacks who had entered the service prior to vietnam and those who were drafted and thus brought revolutionary ideas from the continental united states to the war zone more important maxwell demonstrates how even at the height of civil rights unrest at home black and white soldiers found a sense of brotherhood in the jungles of vietnam incorporating military diplomatic social racial and ethnic topics and perspectives brotherhood in combat presents a remarkably thorough and finely textured account of integration as it was experienced and understood in mid twentieth century america in lost modernities alexander woodside offers a probing revisionist overview of the bureaucratic politics of preindustrial china vietnam and korea he focuses on the political and administrative theory of the three mandarinates and their long experimentation with governments recruited in part through meritocratic civil service examinations remarkable for their transparent procedures the quest for merit based bureaucracy stemmed from the idea that good politics could be established through the development of people the training of people to be politically useful centuries before civil service examinations emerged in the western world these three asian countries were basing bureaucratic advancement on examinations in addition to patronage but the evolution of the mandarinates cannot be accommodated by our usual timetables of what is modern the history of china vietnam and korea suggests that the rationalization processes we think of as modern may occur independently of one another and separate from such landmarks as the growth of capitalism or the industrial revolution a sophisticated examination of asian political traditions both their achievements and the associated risks this book removes modernity from a standard eurocentric understanding and offers a unique new perspective on the transnational nature of asian history and on global historical time why have some states in the developing world been more successful at facilitating industrialization than others challenging theories that privilege industrial policy and colonial legacies this book focuses on state structure and the politics of state formation arguing that a cohesive state structure is as important to developmental success as effective industrial policy based on a comparison of six asian cases including both capitalist and socialist states with varying structural cohesion tuong vu proves that it is state formation politics rather than colonial legacies that have had decisive and lasting impacts on the structures of emerging states his cross national comparison of south korea vietnam republican and maoist china and sukarno s and suharto s indonesia which is augmented by in depth analyses of state formation processes in vietnam and indonesia is an important contribution to understanding the dynamics of state formation and economic development in asia even as a boy growing up amid the green hills of rural pennsylvania robert w black knew he was destined to become a ranger with their three hundred year history of peerless courage and independence of spirit rangers are a uniquely american brand of soldier one foot in the military one in the wilderness and that is what fired black s imagination in this searing inspiring memoir black recounts how he devoted himself body and soul to his proud service as an elite u s army ranger in korea and vietnam and what those years have taught him about himself his country and our future born at the start of the great depression black grew up on a farm at a time of great hardship but also tremendous national determination he was a kid who toughened up fast who learned the hard way to rely on his strength and his wits who saw the country go to war with germany and japan and wept because he was too young to serve as soon as the army would take him black enlisted and as soon as he could muscle his way in he became a ranger as a private first class in the 82d airborne division headquarters black withstood the humiliations of enlisted service in the peacetime brown shoe army when the korean war began he volunteered and trained to be an airborne ranger in korea this young warrior his mind and body bursting with the lusts of adolescence grew up fast literally in the line of fire in clean vivid prose black describes the hell of giving his all for a country that lacked the political resolve to give its all to a war against the north koreans and the chinese if korea was frustrating vietnam was maddening the heart of this book is devoted to the years of action that black saw in long an province starting in 1967 black writes of the perplexity of collaborating with south vietnamese officers whose culture and motives he never fully understood he conjures up the sudden shock of the tet offensive and the daily horror of seeing fellow soldiers and innocent civilians slaughtered sometimes by stray bullets often by carelessness or treachery vietnam challenged everything black had come to believe in and left him totally unprepared for the hostility he would face when he returned to a war weary america written with extraordinary candor and passion a ranger born is the memoir of a man who dedicated the best of his life to everything that is great and enduring about america at once intimate in its revelations and universal in its themes it is a book with profound relevance to our own troubled time in history the cold war was a battle for hearts and minds between free market capitalism and communism represented by the confrontation between the two post world war ii superpowers the usa and the soviet union this is the story of how australia in a frantic search for defence security threw in its lot with the united states in korea and vietnam and with the british in malaya it tells of the paranoid but totally unfounded fear of communist china sweeping south to conquer a defenceless australia successive australian conservative governments sent australian soldiers sailors and airmen to anti communist conflicts that mostly ended in stalemate or humiliating defeat read how the menzies government split the nation by establishing an unfair and unnecessary national service scheme that took hundreds of young australians to their deaths in the jungles of vietnam in an unsuccessful bid to gain favour with a powerful ally the cold war was a time of great tension suspicion and division it was also a time when the world especially australia was forever changed when trust gave way to cynicism
